A primary school in Richmond-Upon-Thames had a workshop on visual impairment as part of an equal opportunities event. Marshgate Primary enlisted Motive8 to deliver the programme to years one to six to focus on interaction with people with disabilities. Sessions including detail on the Paralympics, and sensory aids were used to engage and educate the children on the implications of being visually impaired.

Katie Bentham, deputy head, said: "The workshop gave the children a chance of playing a new sport, whilst learning to use different senses, and all the children involved had tremendous fun." Various activities and sports were included highlighting the adjustment required for playing sport with limited vision and the key skills taught enabled children to gain a better understanding of the sport-related difficulties faced by those with disability.
